“ It's so hard to say goodbye to a person who had such an impact on my life. He was such an amazing man. He was so kind. Never met a stranger, and would go out of his way just to make someone smile. He was funny, charming, trustworthy, and always looked so good..it didn't matter where he was going or what he was doing he had to be the flyest in the room. His laugh was so contagious and the way he made other people feel was definitely the thing I loved most about him. I feel so blessed to have met him.

My thoughts and prayers go out to his parents and sister, and to everyone who knew him for this loss was truly so heartbreaking. Taken way too soon.

Today will be hard, but all of the amazing memories of him will forever be my strength. Rest in peace angel, you are so missed already. Love you!

Chris and I became friends the moment we met. I looked up to him bc of how cool, calm, and collect he was during any and all situations. Not once can I actually say I heard him raise his voice or be aggressive in any way. He was always so humble and always asked the right questions. He was a beautiful person that carried himself well with class and etiquette. Never spoke over or for anyone. We worked well together and always got it done. We all struggle with issues that we don't always want to talk about with people that love us bc we don't want to burden them. Chris will always be in my memories everytime I put on a pair of shoes. He loved his shoes and we would both want to trade but our sizes were just a little to different. Countless hours in the night talking. Thousands of miles driven with nothing but swishahouse in the speakers. He was with me when I was struggling with my family and always treated me as if he was my brother. Very respectful and all around genuine human being. I just want to say sorry for the times I was to hard on him. My condolences to everyone that loved Chris as I did.

“ I remember when I first met Chris. He loved shoes and fashion. I thought that was cool because I didn't know a lot of guys like that. He was always very kind and polite. You could tell he was raised right just by the way he was. He was fun to be around, just positive vibes all the way around with him. He will for sure be missed. My heart goes out to his family.

“ He always looked fly in his top notch sneakers. Never a harsh word from him and always a smile. My heart is heavy and broken and my deepest sorrow is tapped. My condolences go out to the family. A heavy cross to bear indeed.

Until we meet again on those streets if gold my friend. Amy Cherisse Wirt
