“ It feels weird to know I'm no longer going to receive a call every holy holiday, or even randomly to check on my grades and the length of my uniform skirt. Having an amazing, kind, and wise grandmother like mine was hard to come by, but I was blessed and kissed by angels to have you as mine. Tita got me on a level that I don't let many see and in the honesty of it all besides my grandmother she was also my best friend. Everyone that has ever gotten to know me has had the privilege of getting to know her. It was just her, my mother, and I the first couple of years of my life. She will always be my second mother and I will never be able to fully repay her with the amount of love she had and showed to me. I will continue to love this crazy woman for the rest of my life until I see her again. Tita was and is the most incredible person I've had the privilege of knowing and I hope to be even half the woman she was. So until we meet again my angel, I love you more than life. Love your mini Ricky

“ Life long friends are hard to come by but my mom managed to meet a beautiful soul in some of the darkest times of her life. A soul full of cheekiness, laughter, sternness and deep wisdom. Having the pleasure of knowing Santa for more than half of my life will always be a blessing even if the majority of it was from afar. I always knew my mom could confide in her without Santa passing judgement (well mostly). She did always have something to say but it was with the best intentions and usually followed up by witty remarks and some type of chisme. Some of my fondest childhood memories were spent in her home with her and her children. The twins were mine and my sister's first babysitters. They doted on us with cute nicknames and lots of adventures. I vividly remember trying to play off that I could cut one of the twins' hair in the bathroom while I was still in elementary school. I could hear Santa laughing loudly in the distance as she was cooking something up with my mom in the kitchen. The house always smelled like rice, spices and beans. I can still hear her loud sighs as she tries to catch her breath between the laughter from the stories being told. I will miss the long goodbyes in the driveway as my mom said we were leaving but then proceeded to spend the next 45 minutes talking more chisme next to the car. I will miss all the unscheduled visits, the birthdays and holiday feasts. I will miss her cooking and her big hugs. I will miss the core memories of my childhood spent in the coziness of her home as my mom safely confided in her. Heaven gained a sassy badass so they better watch out up there. Love you bunches. - Annabelle (aka Tinkerbell)

“ My Tita. I cherish every second that I had the honor of spending with my grandma. Being in college, working, and being my mother’s son, I have had a rough time finding the right place to show my emotions. I now understand a valuable lesson that Tita had shown me, to think with my heart more than my head. This amazing, wise, and strong-hearted woman helped raise me the second my mom had me. Even at 20 years old, everytime we talked, I would learn a new lesson. To her, she was showering her love and wisdom onto her first grandson. Although she called me her heart, she has always been my heart and will continue to have that place no matter what. Her impact is a piece that I look for in every person because that was her special talent. She supported me in every way that she could and if I was ever second guessing myself in any endeavor, she was there to put me on the right track. She helped bring me back to the lord, a very faithful woman who always knew what the best for me would be. My Tita. My Heart.

“ Others here and over the last few weeks have shared so many memories of Santa. Noah mentioned when he was born and being sick.... Marizela and I were falling apart, my mother and father were there for us, other family and friends were as well... but so many didn't know what to do or say... and then there was Santa... she stayed strong, she prayed, she had faith.... that's just one of so many times where I saw this amazing woman display her FAITH AND LOVE FOR HER FAMILY.

Just as in these other stories I read and have heard... The ONLY way to describe her is with those two words. FAITH AND FAMILY. She loved having her kids, grandkids, sisters, nieces and nephews all together. The smile she would have on her face just watching them all together is something I will never forget.

The faith she had in her Lord is something rarely seen... and it has changed me and so many others...for eternity. She instilled that faith into her daughter Marizela(her mini-me) who in turn helped me develop a faith in that same God.

She will be missed by so many but it hits me in a different way... of course i will miss her, but I hurt for Marizela and my kids... the pain they feel in losing their mother and grandmother is so hard. To them in those hard times all i can tell them is... just remember she is now with that God she knew so intimately, with those family members that she missed so much... she is at peace and has an even brighter smile looking down on us all... our Angel...

As we prepare to lay her to rest I will end this the only way she'd expect from me...

CHEERS SANTA... Welcome to heaven... have some fried chicken or tamales ready for me one day when I get there. We had our friendly disagreements from time to time but you know how much I love you, you were the best second mom a guy could have... Thank you for raising Mari to be the strong woman she is, and for being there and teaching my kids so much...

“ One of the greatest lessons my mom ever gave me was the quiet strength she lived out every single day. Even when life was hard, she carried herself with faith and courage, never once complaining about what she was going through. She showed me what it truly means to be strong. She did not pretend everything was perfect, but by trusting that God was in control. Her love for me was steady, constant, and unconditional. When I think of her, I’m reminded of the kind of person I hope to be: resilient and faithful, just like she taught me.

My dear friend Santa: I remember many things about us as friends, too many to mention. Though, your friendship with me was more valuable than gold. My journey alone without you it’s going to be difficult but your strength will help me keep going with whatever comes my way. Your true friendships, your hugs and your flower tortillas with refried beans will never be forgotten.
